About The Author

Kiersten Fay was born with a set of crayons and an artist's soul. In school, art was her favorite elective, and that hasn't changed over the years, though it has manifested into different creative pursuits. She holds an Associate degree in Visual Communications, which led to a career in graphic design, but as it turned out, making up wild stories is her passion. Currently she is an accomplished romance author with two series' and seven full-length novels under her belt. She resides in Georgia with the love of her life, two quirky cats, and a clumsy but lovable dog.
